Double Major: French and Economics

I double majored in French and Economics during my studies at UCD. I learned a lot about the world while doing a foreign language. The people in the classes are all interesting, professors and students alike and great resources. Anything you choose to learn about or really, anything you're interested in will eventually come around again in your life; whether it be a foreign language that you take for 9 quarters or an archaeology class you randomly, sign up for. It comes back to be useful for you. After graduation, I worked with the TAPIF program, teaching English in Northern France for a year. Currently I'm in a MA program at Sacramento State.
